If caring is your calling, find a job that's made for you!

Are you out of work or unhappy with your current job? Take the first step to enter one of the fastest growing fields in the country. You don't need experience in healthcare to land one of these jobs. In some cases, all you need to prequalify is appropriate training and certifications (where required), and what we call the Caring Gene® — that instinctive ability to want to help others. Register for the Caring Gene® Career Fair — virtual events where you can video chat with employers and apply for hundreds of job and training opportunities available right now in the long term care industry across New York state. There are clinical job openings, plus training to become certified to work in long term care.
